There are a lot of languages in the world and all of them are different compared to one another. But is it really so important to have that many languages ⁻³⁰

Firstly, language represents a whole nation, it represents a country and a way of life there. By knowing a language, a person shows who they are in terms of nationality and culture. And culture itself shows the history of the country. That means, a language connects people to their past history and history of the country. 56

Moreover, a language is capable of connecting different people and different cultures, too. For example, a person whose mother language is English, can speak Swedish. That means that they can talk to people from Sweden with ease and even more in there, which leads to studying the Swedish culture and history. Same goes with any other person from any other country.

To conclude, I believe that language can tell a lot about a person, because it is strongly bound to the cultural and historical features of whole countries and nationalities. Also, learning languages always leads to better understanding and peace among people from completely culturally different countries.

"Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going"

Rita Mae Brown

Write 200–220 words.

Use the following plan:

- make an introduction;
- express your personal opinion and give two reasons to support it;
- give examples to illustrate your reasons, using your personal experience, literature or background knowledge;
- make a conclusion.

Transfer your answers to the answer sheet!
